Notes on Contributors

John P. Portelli is a Killiam Postdoctoral Fellow at Dalhousie University, Halifax, Nova Scotia.

Mark Weinstein is Director of the Reasoning Skills Project, Center for the Improvement of Education of Queens College, City University of New York.

Dale Cannon is director of the Philosophy for Children program at Western Oregon State College, Monmouth, Oregon.

Debby Hochstein teaches at Edinburgh School of the Protestant School Board in Montreal, Canada.

M. Mark Wasicsko is the Dean of the School of Education at Texas Wesleyan College, Fort Worth, Texas.

Steven M. Ross is Professor of Education at Memphis State University, Memphis, Tennessee.

Ann Margaret Sharp is the Associate Director of the Institute for the Advancement of Philosophy for Children, Montclair State College, Upper Montclair, New Jersey.

Adam Cavnar is a student in the Philosophy for Children master's program at Montclair State College, Upper Montclair, New Jersey.

Ronald P. Cecere teaches at a private Catholic high school in West Caldwell, New Jersey.

Sister Kristin Crawford teaches ninth through twelfth grades at Sacred Heart Academy in Springfield, Illinois.

Betty Kata is a student in the Philosophy for Children master's program at Montclair State College, Upper Montclair, New Jersey.

Brian Lamb is the Philosophy for Children Coordinator at the United Nations School, New York and is about to begin work on his doctorate in Philosophy for Children in Mexico.

Sylvia Mandel is the Associate Director of the Brazilian Center of Philosophy for Children in Sao Paulo, Brazil.

Karen Morelli is a student in the Philosophy for Children master's program at Montclair State College, Upper Montclair, New Jersey.

Hreinn Palsson is the Director of the Icelandic Center of Philosophy for Children, Raykjavik, Iceland.

Terry Riordan is a teacher in the Glen Rock Public Schools in New Jersey and a student in the Philosophy for Children master's program at Montclair State College, Upper Montclair, New Jersey.

Maynard J. Saunders is a doctoral student in the Philosophy for Children program at the University of Southern Illinois, Carbondale, Illinois.

Richard E. Morehouse is Assistant Professor of Psychology at Viterbo College, La Cross, Wisconsin.