

NOTES AND COMMENTS

This issue of Analytic Teaching contains a number of papers that were delivered at the Philosophy for Children conference held on the Texas Wesleyan College campus. That conference, "Philosophy for Children: The Second Decade", brought together thirty-five speakers from around the world. In the June 1988 issue of Analytic Teaching, we will present more papers from the conference. Also presented in this issue are professional as well as student papers.

To our knowledge, Caroline Nickel was the first person to be trained in Texas in Philosophy for Children. In addition, she was one of the best students we have had in the Analytic Teaching program. Perhaps that goes some way toward explaining the chagrin we felt on reading her recent letter. With her permission, we publish that letter.
