NOTES OF INTEREST

Several notes of interest to readers. First, The North American Philosophy for Children Association is growing. If you wish to become a member and to participate in the first conference tentatively scheduled for the summer of 1994, please notify Mort Morehouse at Viterbo College. A strong and active North American Philosophy for Childrens Association can provide support for new programs, address training and education needs particular to North America, and further research activities and scholarship.

Secondly, Felix García Moriyón has agreed to host the next ICPIC congress. It will be held at the Universidad de Alcala de Henares which is located in a small town outside Madrid. The congress is scheduled for September 22-25, 1993. Those interested in submitting a paper are encouraged to send an abstract by June 1 to the Spanish Center for Philosophy for Children, Ferán Gonzales, 23, (2-A), Madrid 28009, Spain. All abstracts should be submitted on Computer Disk (Wordperfect format) and an original paper version. Topics considered for the conference are: 1) Varieties of implementation of philosophy for children; in what ways and contexts is the program being used, and what research has been done to support such use? 2) What is the place of philosophy for children in moral and political education in the face of current world development? 3) How can (or does) philosophy for children address the challenges placed on education by feminist, environmentalist and multi-cultural perspectives? 4) In what ways can philosophy for children foster development of the types of creative thinking needed to cope with contemporary problems? Felix tells us that the conference will be conducted in keeping with the stated aims of ICPIC, that is, no papers will be read. Rather, abstracts will be sent to all participants well before the conference. Participants will be expected to familiarize themselves with this material and come ready to discuss the ideas presented. For further details, write Felix at the above address or see the note enclosed with Volume 7, Number 1 of the Bulletin of the International Council for Philosophical Inquiry with Children.

Thirdly, Analytic Teaching will not accept xerox copies of papers as they cannot be read by the optical scanner. This means that if your paper is accepted for publication, we will have to request an original and thus delay the publication of your article. Those submitting by computer disk are also requested to send a paper copy in addition to the disk. See the back pages of this issue for more details regarding submission of articles.

The art for this issue is that of Dana Spurlock. Some readers may recognize her style as some of the art in the Spring 1992 issue was hers. A Viterbo art major, Dana was killed in a car accident on her way home for Christmas. As a small tribute to her talent and her spirit, we dedicate this issue of Analytic Teaching to her.
